

I would like to state my support for the extension of the DMCA waiver for “jailbeaking” smart phones. I also would like to see any waiver apply to tablets , game consoles, and all other consumer devices that are capable of being jailbroken. My interest in this is as an electronics hobbyist, and FCC licensed Amateur Radio Operator. Both groups have long modified ordinary consumer devices to fit their unique desires and needs We purchased the equipment, Everyone should be free to modify our property to fit our needs free of concern over DMCA reprisals. Jailbreaking does not deprive the manufacturer of anything, other than unwarranted control over their customers activities My support of jailbeaking is not support of anyone benefiting in anyway from copyright material they have not purchased. Thank you for the opportunity to state my thoughts in this matter.

Doug Younker