I have been an iPhone user for quite some time and I had found out about jail breaking soon after I began using the device.

Jailbreaking is an innocent act to your device which enables the user to have more customization to their operating system.

I am currently a developer and if jail breaking continues to be legal this will allow not only me, but other developers to display their apps within the jailbreak community if it is rejected from the app store.

Thank you for your time and I hope reading this will help make a decision towards fully legalizing jailbreaking
