Dear Sirs,

We are a small retail store. Among the many items we sell are patterns for projects. These are created by individuals, often not officially registered by the authors and sold to us for resale. From time to time these original authors abandon their small businesses and become unavailable for contact and purchase of their patterns. They may have died, retired, or simply moved and left no forwarding information.

When this is the case and we are unable to locate them it would be useful for us to be able to continue to offer these patterns to our customers for resale, but we feel unsure what liability this would open us to.

I believe that clearing up the legalities involved would make us more comfortable with this. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,

Halcyon Blake
